In Get Your Hopes Up, the author gives us a vulnerable look into her life while going through what seemed to be some insurmountable difficulties with an unbelievably positive attitude. In the forty-third chapter of Isaiah, he begins talking about when we pass through the rivers saying they won't overflow us or when we go through fire we won't be burnt. But what about when it feels like He saves us from the fire by dumping us in the river and turns around to do it all again and again? "I saw this guy, and I felt like his head, which seems weird, but that's what happens when you spend too much time alone trying to figure out how to break into "the market", you start feeling like a combover, all scraggly and pasted down, well, that's how I feel. He said, "Yes, I am balding, dang it, but I'm not bald yet, and I am going to take this modicum of hair that I have and use it, like a tiger with it's stripes or a badger with whatever it is that makes badgers feel more badgerly, and I am going to be the man. were effects of events in my life. When family or friends are hurt, when I was hurt, or feeling down and out, I wanted to say something but could not, so I wrote down my feelings. Anger, joy, sadness, and love were some of the feelings I used to write a great deal of my works. Have you ever stood back and looked at the world around you? All the fear, all the hatred, all the sadness, it is all mixed in with the joy, happiness and jubilation also around. The world is confused and frustrated and so am I. If I could, I would fix it all.

for herself in a town where she's never quite felt at home. When she "borrows" her neighbor's car to perform at an open mic night, she realizes her life could be much bigger than where she came from. After a fight with her dad, April packs her stuff and leaves for good, setting off on a journey to find a life that's all hers. Driving without a chosen destination, she stops to rest in Ithaca. Her only plan is to survive, but as she looks for work, she finds a kindred sense of belonging at Cafe Decadence, the local coffee shop. Still, somehow, it doesn't make sense to her that life could be this easy.

The more she falls in love with her friends in Ithaca, the more she can't shake the feeling that she'll hurt them the way she's been hurt. As April moves through the world, meeting people who feel like home, she chronicles her life in the songs she writes and discovers that where she came from doesn't dictate who she has to be. This lyrical, unflinching tale is for anyone who has ever yearned for the fierce power of found family or to grasp the profound beauty of choosing to belong.

Poetry. Women's Studies. This is a book of two books of poetry that stand alone, yet are in conversation with each other. There are two front covers, as internally the books are back to back. DON'T GET YOUR HOPES UP is a collection of declarations rounding corners, running to embrace. These poems hold monsters next to notes. Together, they say, "i build myself a deep nest," as though to imagine an ever-shifting space of both reckoning and healing in times of despair. It is precisely here, in "the place just behind the eyes," that seeing becomes a political act, as clear as the avowal to never look away. The poems of DON'T GET YOUR HOPES UP work through nothing less than magic. MOON WOMAN begins "beholden to a body," at once lyrical and sharp, an incredible collection of poems that span intimate terrain to collective memories. With deftness, Fatima floats, submerges, and comes up for air. Her words, like testimonies, skim horizontally across the surface of her skin. There's a tenderness that is also critical and self-aware, calling for witness after trespass. Sit with MOON

"Why do bad things happen?" "God, I don't understand!" Heartbreak and loss happen to us all. On New Year's Day, at the age of thirty-seven, Karen Jensen's husband died suddenly in his bed, leaving her alone to raise two grieving boys and pastor a bewildered congregation. Despite her strong faith and love for God, she had some serious questions. Has tragedy shaken the foundation of your life? Have you been blindsided by an event you never expected to face? What should we do when we're going through the dark places in life? ...when we've lost everything? ...when we're in pain? ...when we're wondering why? With a mix of sharp insight and warm optimism, Karen skillfully combines experience and scripture to guide you through the land mines of doubt and confusion that come with loss. She then provides solid principles for moving forward past the pain and into a brighter future.
